COMMENTS ON BILL 163 by Rev. Stewart Crysdale Assistant Secretary, Board of Evangelism and Social Service The United Church of Canada

Mr. Chairman, I have a few comments on Bill 163 to clarify and support the submission of The United Church of Canada, as presented by my colleague, Mr. Hord.

First, we have recent evidence that the members and adherents of the United Church in Ontario solidly support the contention of the General Council that a medical insurance plan should be universal, comprehensive and contributory. A systematic, random sample indicates that our people, furthermore, believe such a plan should be government-operated and tax-supported. We are now conducting a national survey of the United Church, and returns to date show that 67 per cent of members and adherents in Ontario favour a plan having these characteristics. By direct inference, Mr. Chairman, the United Church rejects the limited coverage proposed in Bill 163.

Secondly, we stress the fact that the need for a universal, comprehensive and tax-supported medical care plan is becoming increasingly and critically urgent. Thousands of workers are retiring earlier, for the most part involuntarily, due to obsolescence of their skills and trades in our rapidly changing technological society. The trend toward automation and concentration in merchandising and service industries is steadily reducing the opportunities for self-exmployment which formerly served to augment the shrinking income of older workers. A few years ago, displaced farm and factory workers often could find work in stores, laundries, construction and other unskilled labouring jobs. These openings are shrinking rapidly in relation to the increasing work force.

We are also told by analysts that the teenage component of the labour force will double by 1970. Already unemployment among youths aged 16 - 24 is twice as great as the rate in general. The heavy burden of supporting them

43

The same Search and a same charter Letter Fall Sittle Son and Social Targer trough v lan vilante or 201 IIIH po grannapo (ndemávila) incidenti el como de cresto en 201 illan el como por encidad de como the selections of the Test Cate Charles Company of Company of the Community of the Communit first, we there execute to the property of the property of the contract of the united Chicon in the State and Company of the metal then at Hering Control chart a codicel ladder when the selected by introduced comprehensia and reactiorganical examples and the state of the character of the state of the the community for foreign and provided the second of the s

Elvis notice entropy of the court beauty to the court of the court of town notes to a few or one been completely presented to a section and a section of the complete level of the c tobe. Their their

you dat out to transmiss actions and logistic set of the daying out of and the state of t eril geistoves se general veneral, the heavy burden es sevretting the rests upon working class families at the very time when family allowances and insurance coverage under contract and voluntary plans run out.

The economic and social prospects for working class families are further diminished by the continuing movement of population to metropolitan areas. We have a vicious circle of shrinking employment in rural areas and a drift of people to the cities, where unskilled men get low-paying jobs and women and girls get temporary, part-time, low-paid work. The family farm and intimate rural community once provided a small measure of economic and social security. There was always an extra place or two at someone's table. This kind of informal, communal assistance is not available to the working class family in metropolitan society. White collar as well as blue collar workers are terribly vulnerable to market changes, short and long range.

Mr. Chairman, some of us have devoted many years to the service of lower middle-class and so-called lower-class families in both country and city. I myself have been privileged to serve them in the church for twenty years. I have also been moved by such trends as I have briefly described to make urban society the subject of careful academic study.

I am convinced, and my Church is convinced, that the provisions for medical services proposed in Bill 163 are totally inadequate to meet the needs of modern industrial society. This is "horse and buggy" legislation for an urgent space-age need.

Adequate provision for health services in a country with the high overall standard of living Canadians enjoy must take account of the wide discrepancies that exist in size of income and conditions of health. We are gratified that this problem is recognized by the government in the introduction of this bill. But the bill's methods of meeting the problem are unacceptable.

rests upon working class families at the very time when family allowances and restances plans run out. The accounts and social products for working class families and further distributed by the continuing soverthing by well-time to account the continuing soverthing deployment in turns arose and a drift of the rural community once provided a equil necutro of composite and social security. vetropolitas spalety. White collar as well as blue collar workers are retrivity. valente do market changes, shore act dong rengag biddis-class and so-called lower-class families in both country and city: i bywelf bywe been privileged to serve them in the church for eventy years. I of melora industrial receipty. This is "horse and buggy" legislation located very of apace-age need.

Adequate provision for health pervices in a country with the characters. oble on to devoce that law volue and bank guivel do breferta its. gracified that rate problem is decourage, and conditions on makes we are not returned to the following problem in the decourage of the contraction 0

Our specific objections, briefly, are three-fold. First, the proposed means of spreading the risk still excludes the growing multitudes of poor but self-supporting families in both country and city. Its voluntary nature and high cost rule them out.

Second, an extention of the means test to include many marginal people is morally and socially unsound and reprehensible. Most working people are precariously holding on to the shreds of independence that still remain to them in our mechanized, mass society. They are doing so with a wholesome determination and pride that should be encouraged by government. A higher proportion of working class families own their homes, or are buying them (at high financing costs), than middle and upper class people. To require of large numbers of them in times of prolonged illness the sacrifice of their homes and other small independencies in exchange for health services is both unjust and economically and politically unsound. When the lower middle-class are deprived of their hard-won independence, freedom and democracy quickly crumble.

The question of the degree of poverty and the extent of need for subsidized health services without a means test should be carefully assessed, Mr. Chairman. We have statistics of unemployment and indigence, and these tell a depressing story of massive want. Bill 163 would help many of these unfortunate people, it is true, but there is a much greater burden of poverty or near-indigence that is not revealed in readily available statistics. It is estimated that one-fifth of the population of the United States are denied the minimal levels of health, housing, food and education, in spite of the highest over-all standard of living in the world. We do not have firm figures for Canada or Ontario, although steps are now being taken to obtain them. It may be asserted, however, on the grounds of empirical observation by church and social workers, that the degree of poverty and need of public health services should shock and disturb taxpayers and law-makers alike.

Our appointed objections, briefly, and three-file, a librar, the produced but means of exponenting the wife the country and only. Its voluntary nature and bigh cost rule them out.

Second, an extention of the means test to include with despitat proplet as morally and socially unsound and representation. Host working politicate if a precentiously holding on to the shrede or independence that is illustrated in the charactery. They are duing as with a wholesome doternate and prife that should be encouraged by government. A higher properties of working class tarilles on their house, or are boying them (as high numbers of their independence individual that properties and the civies of protonged filmose the satisfice of their house and other scall independencias in civies of protonged filmose the satisfice of their house and other scall independencias in civies of protonged for health services is both unjust and concentrally and politically unsound. Them the lover widdle-class are destributed of their hard-won individuality unsound. Them the lover widdle-class are destributed as their hard-won individualities, involve and denominary quickly complete.

aubaidized health services without a rema test should be caudfully aubased, in. Chairmen. 'Va have ateristics of unesologuent and indisended, and these vall a depressing story of manatus wart. Bill'162 could belightly us thous working a depressing story of manatus wart. Bill'162 could belightly us thouse was unfortunate people, it is true, but there is a wick decated by deated by another or near-indigence that is not revenied in deadely swallable statis button. It is estimated that does first in popilish with the course statis button. It the admiral levels of health, housing, mod whited of the working in the statis when the week the first statis of the formal in the course of the

Our third specific objection is to the restrictive nature of the services to be insured under Bill 163. We are grateful for hospital insurance, and, heaven knows, we need insurance to meet physicians' and surgeons' bills. But the high cost of drugs, dental care and other health needs impoverish thousands of marginal families. These services must be included in an equitable plan. If you desire, sir, these observations can be substantiated by thousands of case studies in the files of church and social workers.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I come to my last point. It may seem to acturial minds on your committee and in the seats of the treasury, that we are asking for the moon. The Church, the labour movement and social workers are accustomed to the objection that it will cost too much. This was the sad story when we pressed for Workmens' Compensation, mothers' and widows' allowance. unemployment insurance, old age pensions, maximum hours of work, minimum rates of pay, industrial standards, bargaining rights, holidays with pay, and other progressive legislation. I am sure it was the same when our forefathers demanded a public postal service and "free" universal education. But it is a matter of record in economic history that high wages and social security contribute importantly to social stability, progress and general prosperity.

Some complain that what we ask for will cost the public too much. No one knows better than a clergyman the immense and tragic cost of sickness in a society where preventive care is neglected. The fact is that the least able to pay are carrying the heaviest share of the burden. You well know, sir, that broad insurance coverage will not increase the total social cost, but distribute it equitably through society. It is this basic humanitarian principle, Mr. Chairman, that we find is insufficiently served in Bill 163.

the high coat of drugs, dental care and other health needs legoworleh by thousands of case studies in the files of church and social workers. other has been been de-minds on your considere and in the seats of the treating that we are calling for the moon. The Church, the labour neverant and recial westers are story when we pressed for Porkgens' Compensation, mothers' and uldows' allowance unergloyment insurance, ald age pensions, morison hours of work, adains rates of pay, industrial standards, bargaining rights, holidays sick pay, and other

-anthonies

watter of record in accounts history that him which had social security

Your Commission might enquire into the costs and benefits of universal, comprehensive medicare plans which have existed in many civilized countries for years. There is little evidence that the cost has crippled the competitive power or endangered the basic freedoms of such countries as Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Australia, New Zealand and other countries which share our basic outlook on life.

Ontario as a whole can well afford a universal, comprehensive, contributory health insurance plan. She has pioneered in other progressive social legislation. Let not the vested interests of a few companies hinder this province from sound and statesmanlike legislation in this matter of fundamental public interest. The public is not forever deceived. The basic principle at question, Mr. Chairman, is not total cost, but public as against private administration of the measures required to meet the common man's need for health care. It is plainly too much to expect private insurance firms alone to undertake such a vast and unprofitable scheme. It is within the capacity of government alone to do so, in co-operation, of course, with the health professions and concerned private organizations, including insurance companies. Furthermore, this is the duty of government in a society dedicated to the welfare of all its citizens.

February 5th, 1964.

Your Consission wight, enquire into the costs and bonefice of universal, comprehensive medicate plane which have existed in wany civilized equatries for years. There is little evidence that the cost has cripped the commutative power or endangered the basic freedoms of such countries as freed, British, the Onterto as a whole can well afford a universal, convenientive, co hatory health insurance plan. She has pionestyd in other progressive social legislation. Let not the vested interests of a few communius binder this public interest. The public is not forever deceived. The heale principle of question, in, distroso, is not been cost, but public so exchant private administration of the resource required to ment the cotons and a need the